

Dr. Claudia H. Thurber, Esq.

Consultant in Occupational Safety and Health Policy
Former Counsel for Health Standards, Office of the Solicitor
U.S. Department of Labor

Claudia H. Thurber, a veteran of over twenty-two years of Federal government service, was the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration's (OSHA) Counsel for Health Standards until her retirement in February 2006. She is an expert on the regulatory process; having worked on some of OSHA's most important and far reaching standards that protect workers from hazards. Ms. Thurber has spoken at numerous government and professional meetings on current issues in regulation, particularly occupational safety and health, mine safety and environmental issues. She has lectured to academics, government managers and graduate students in the US and abroad. She is currently working as a consultant to OSHA on regulation of Silica and Walking and Working Surfaces and Fall Protection Systems. : "The Politics of Regulation in the Obama Administration," a chapter in Obama in Office, Paradigm Publishers, 2011; Congress, the President and the Politics of Regulation, a chapter in Rivals for Power Presidential-congressional Relations; Rowan and Littlefield, 2013.

She has also taught Political Science courses at The American University, including Film and Politics and courses in evidence based thinking and writing and rulemaking for OSHA.

Ms. Thurber holds a JD from The Washington College of Law at The American University, an MA in Government and Politics from the University of Maryland, and a BA in History from Washington State University. She is a member of the Washington State Bar.